One luggage van was blown to pieces and seven carriages thrown off the rails, but no body was injured. The explosives which destroyed the imperial baggage train are stated to have been placed on Monday evening, under the rails, at a point over which the imperial train would pass just before entering the Moscow railway station. The czar arrived safely, however, at 11 o'clock on Monday night, and the explosion occurred on the passage of the baggage train, a half hour afterwards. The house from whence the mine was exploded has been discovered, and search is making for the perpetrators of the outrage. The czar will arrive in St. Petersburg to-morrow.

He indicates that he will accept the presidency of the American canal company, and shows that he is in earnest in the matter by advising Ammen that the first thing that ought to be done is to introduce and have passed by congress at the earliest practicable moment, a bill in-corporating the American Isthmus can al

It is now understood that the company is not content with any half way measures, and that the offer has been made to the commissioners to take the whole amount of the stock held by the city at par. The action up to this point has been official, but there is little doubt that the arrangements will be consummated.

an Causual Tribute to His Memory by Gen, Sherman. Washington, December 3.—The following is the full text of Gen. Sherman's order announcing the death of Gen. Jeff C. Davis:

GENERAL ORDERS NO. 104.

HEADQUARTERS OF THE ARMY, ADJUTANT GENERAL'S OFFICE, WASHINGTON, Dec. 1, 1879.—The telegraph will have carried the sad news of the death of Col. and Byt. Maj. Gen. Jefferson C. Davis to all parts of our country long before these orders can even be penned; yet the general deems it his duty, in pursuance of a time honored custom, to pay this tribute to one of the historic characters of our day. General Davis began his military career June 19, 1846. When a mere boy, as a private soldier in the 3d Indiana volunteers, which had the honor to share in the glorious campaign of Buena Vista, under Gen. Taylor, he attracted the notice of his officers, and, influenced alone by an ardent zeal and love of country, he sought and obtained his first commission as second lieutenant in the jet artillery on the 17th of June, 1848. In this most excellent regiment he served faithfully thirteen years, mastering his profession, and storing his mind with knowledge for use in the great day of trial which he was destined to share with the comrades he loved so well. He was promoted to first lieutenant on the 28th of February, 1852, and to captain May, 14, 1861; but when the great civil war of 1861 burst on this country he knew that the little regular army was entirely inadequate to the occasion, and he turned at once to his friends in Indiana and was elected colonel of the 22d Indiana infantry, Aug. 15, 1861. His was no uncertain action, but with all the ardor of his nature he threw his whole soul into the contest, and wherever the fighting was hardest for four years we find him at the very front. For recount his deeds would require a volume, and the general will only venture to speak of him as a corps commander in war and a department commander in peace. On the 5th day of August, 1864, General Davis commanded a division in the Fourteenth corps (Gen. Thomas's old corps), and was in front of Atlanta. A vacancy occurring, on General Thomas's recommendation he was duly appointed to command that corps. He had raised t GENERAL ORDERS NO. 104. corps bore a most prominent part in the capture of Atlants, in the march to the sea, in the capture of Atlants, in the march to the sea, in the capture of Atlants, in the march to the sea, in the capture of Atlants, in the march to the sea, in the capture of Atlants, in the march to the sea, in the capture of Atlants, in the march to the capture of the Carolinas—never aday or an hour absent from his command until the war was over and until his government had disbanded the great army of which he formed so honored a part. Then came the harder and more thankless task of reduction. Though by merit and hard service he had risen to the high rank of corps commander, usually that of lieutenant general, he, in common with many others of his comrades, had to be content with a regiment, and by reorganization he fell to the 23d infantry, servicy on the Pacific coast—like the patriot and soldier he was, he went cheerfully to his new post, and for a time commanded the department of Alaska, taking a deep interest; in the affairs and inhabitants of that remote territory; but as reduction went on that department also had to be broken up-and his regiment was brought down to Oreson, then commanded by General E. E. S. Canby. In the spring of 1873 General Canby, while negotiating with the Mode Indians and a piece command of the department devolved temporarily on Gen. Davis. With a courage and skill which entitles his memory to special honor, he so conducted matters that the treacherous Modess were severely punished, and the remnant of the tribe removed to a place where they are powerless for mischief. In the ordinary routine of service since that time General Davis has rendered good service in almost every quarter of the great west, and, for the sake of rest, as his health bedinary routine of service since that time General Davis has rendered good service in almost every quarter of the great west, and, for the sake of rest, as his health began to show the effects of hard service and disappointments, his regiment was brought to Omaha and then to Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, where he at once set about establishing what he knew the army wanted so much—a school of instruction for infantry. But the exigency of actual service sgain called his regiment to the Indian frontier, and his health being very infirm he was advised to try to re-establish it by rest and travel. His last military duty was as a member of the ocard, at chicago, appointed to reconcile and determine certain condicts of opinion as to the battles of Stone tiver and Chickamanga, in which he bore a most honorable part. Very recently he attended here in Washington the ceremonies of unveiling the equestrian statue of his late commander, Gen. Thomas, and as senior vice president he presided at several meetings of the society of the army of the Cumberland, on the 19th and 20th of November. The telegraph now announces that he did at Chicago yesterday, Nov. 30, 1879 of a severe cold followed by pneumonis, which, added to his hiready weakened condition, terminated his life. At the request of his wife, his body will be interred at Indianapolis. Though only colonel of the 23d injury at the time of his death, his fame and history belong to the whole army, and the flags of military posts will be displayed at half-mast the day after the receipt of this order. General Sheridan will give all orders necessary to mark the respect in which this honored soldier is universally held by the army, and if the family request it he may order a guard of honor to participate in the funeral ceromonies.

As to finances, most of the congressmen seem to be as cowardly and hypocritical as they were a year ago. The only ones who say what they mean and mean what they say are the brawling inflationists.

TALMAGE's tabernacle has seceded from the Brooklyn presbytery. Hereafter it will be an independent concern. This is because of the "persecutions" visited upon Talmage. Talmage is what Buck Fanshaw would call a "gospel sharp," and he an now have plenty of room to prance.

ALL those horrible charges of the Milwaukee Sentinel against the house of correction of that county have been proven true. The Sentinel has deserved well of its day and generation. It should be thanked in the name of humanity, and swift punishment meted out to the incarnate fiends, whose wanton cruelty finds a parallel only in Russia.

THE attitude of the Romish archbishop of Boston on the school question is not an objectionable one at all. It tempers the action of priests in cases of disobedience by the laity, and counsels these that where they send their children to the public shool they take care that they have dilient instruction in christian doctrine outde of school · hours-advice that protest int parents should follow.

It is exasperating to hear the tope of western republican congressmen in discussing finance. Without exception, they descant on the beneficent results of resumption, and make them the basis of their epposition to any change in the present anomalous system of our finances. They must know that without a change the present results can not last. The house is built on sand. A foundation must be put in or it will go to wreck.

SENATOR CARPENTER is quick on the trigger with a resolution that any change in the existing financial system is inexpedient. The soft moneyites, like the secessionists, cry that all they want is "to be let alone." They know as well as every one else that a let alone policy will be an Antion victory. "Time and I are two." hillip II used to say. So it is with the c inflationists. With time they will aske silver the standard of value, and t en all values will begin to fluctuate.

Right for Once. There are few prominent men in the country who go wrong so easily and keep trrong so steadily as William D. Kelly, of Pennsylvania, but he has got right once, whether by accident or design we shall not presume to guess. He intends to offer a resolution in the house to the effect that the executive department can not constitutionally negotiate a commercial treaty with any country which shall fix the rates of duty to be imposed on foreign commodities entering the United States for consumption. He says it would be "an invasion of one of the highest prerogatives of the house of representatives," and an infraction of the provision of the constitution which requires "all bills for raising revenue to originate in the house." That the constitution puts the power both of raising and distributrevenue in the hands of congress is as clear as any power by that instrument. The idea is, derived from the British constitution, which makes the revenue power the one great safeguard of the liberties of 'the people against the power of the crown. The people's repre-

purse, and the crown is powerless without money. There is no such danger of executive encroachment here as there is, or was, there, but still the power of controlling the revenue can be lodged no where so fitly as in the hands of those who have the revenue to pay. New duties on foreign commodities is one of the two main modes of raising revenue. Until the war forced us to extraordinary expenses and modes of getting the means to meet them, the collections at custom houses constituted all the revenue we had, except a trifle from the sale of public lands. The power to control this source of revenue is vital to the general power to raise revenue, and that is exclusively the duty of congress. If a treaty fixes rates of duty, the executive departments, in negotiating that treaty, assumes to determine the amount of revenue to be derived from that source, and that is, constitutionally, none of its business. It is "raising revenue," or limiting revenue, which is the same thing, and that is the duty of congress alone, the house alone poraries, we suspect that a good many boastful anticipations will be spoiled by the next census. It will certainly be the most complete and accurate ever taken, and may be trusted, whether it fails or fulfills high expectations. There is no reason to suppose that there will appear any greater state or national growth than the tolerably regular accretions of the past fifty years would indicate. There is a certain steadiness of movement in great bodies of population through long spaces of time, that may be almost as safely assumed a law as the times and motions of the planets. Occasional fluctuations are sure to balance each other in the result. Young states and towns often exhibit amazing instances of abnormal growth, but they don't affect the general development, and in a short time they turn into the current and move with the steady rate of the mass. Accepting the ratios established by the census developments of the last half century, let us see where the state and the nation will probably be set by census of 1880 The growth of Indiana has been astonishingly regular since 1830. It has averaged about 334,000, or the third of a million, each decade. It was 342,000 from 1830 to 1840; 303,000 from 1840 to 1850; 362,000 from 1850 to 1860; 830,000 from 1860 to 1870. Allowing the same increase from the decade almost past, we shall have in the next census a population of about 2,020,000. But we may reasonably expect it to be larger, because the average of growth was reduced in the last decade by the war. We should say that Indiana will show a population of about 2,050,000, or between that and 2,100,000 in the census. There is a very general disposition to set the population of the whole country at about 50,000,000. No rational probability will sustain such a result. The largest growth of any decade both proportionate and absolute, was from 1850 to 1860-8,300,000. From '60 to '70 it was only 7,100,000. But for the war it would no doubt have equalled the preceding decade, though we have no reason to think it would have been larger. Nor there any reason to think the growth of the present decade will be larger. We have had no war, but we have had no immigration, either-that is no heavy influx of foreign population-till within a year, and immigration was very heavy in the decade from '50 to '60. It will take an addition of nearly 12,000,000, or fifty per cent, more than that of '50 to '60 to give us a national population of 50,000,000, and we can not reasonably expect an addition of more than 10,000,000 at the outside. That will give us 48,000,000. We may reach that, but the chances are that we shall hardly get above 47,000,000 or a decade growth of 9,000,000. CURRENT COMMENS.

The revenue report furnishes some interesting figures for calculation on the subject of temperance, or intemperance. In 1840 this country had a population of 17,069,453; it has now one of not less than 48,000,000, and not improbably upward of 50,000,000. Here is a growth of nearly three-fold; but in the same interval the amount of spirits distilled has not doubled, it has barely increased fifty per cent. But the use of alcohol in the trade has increased enormously since 1840. Varnishes are used on furniture to an extent unheard of a generation ago, and out of all proportion to the growth in population. The manufacturer of hats uses up alcohol in large quantities, and the value of the annual production of hats and caps rose from $14,000, 000 in 1860 to $24,848,167 in 1870, and has probably increased in a much larger ratio from 1840 to 1879. The deduction from this certainly is that we drink less alcohol than

A correspondent of the New York Times from Atlanta, Georgia, gives some specific information concerning the Grant movement. He cites the name and position of each of a number of men in Georgia, of considerable local prominence in the democratic party of that state, who are prepared to support General Grant for the presidency, and the opinion of others that a similar feeling prevails in other states. The motive is a frank desire to share in the loaves and fishes, which they think it is becoming evident that the democratic party will have very little voice in distributing for some time to come. There are over 1,000 bills pending in the house of representatives and about 750 in the senate, and yet an immense lot of fresh ones were introduced yesterday.

The fact of the matter is, to our thinking that the women of this country have no ambition to take part in the turmoil of elections, and they are content to trust to their fathers, husbands and brothers the government of the country. In the past they have seen laws which were unjust to women wiped from the statute books, and they see to day that they are the freest and mos honored women in the world. Women who have families to look after, who have children to rear and homes to make pleasant, have little time for the discussion of politics.— New York Dispatch.

Her image was ever present in my mind, when leasted my examinations at the Vienna Therpassed my examinations at the Vienna Theresianum, amid my comrades at the military school in England, in my study, and in the battle lines of Lacar. It was against the wish of her family and mine, against the advice of President Canovas, and against public opinion, which dislikes the Montpensier family, that I succeeded in making her my wife. I loved her as kings rarely do, and I lived with her like the most affectionate bourgeoise. We were never apart. We shared alike work, pleasure and danger. I told her beforehand whatever I meant to say in pub-lic speeches. She took deep interest in everything I did, everything I said, and everything I did, everything I said, and everything I attempted. When she died I desired nothing so much as to die myself. For two months I shut myself up in the Escurial, not, as has been stated, to addict myself to ascetic practices, like Philip II., for am no bigot, but to weep over Mercedes's coffin. After that I sought amusements to drown my grief, but I ultimately found this existence would not do. Now that I am promised the hand of the Archduchess Christine, I feel that I am born to a new life and that I may yet again be happy. It is not for me, who loves the Archduchess, to make general reflections as to the best sort of women. The Archduchess unites all the qualities of the best types of the Viennese, for which I have much sympathy. Her character is frank, her temperament gay. Among the masses there is despondency and disgust, and among the leaders indec There is a noticeable gathering, however, of the broken hopes and scattered legions about the name of Bayard that may become a right lively rally after awhile. Indeed, before the York election there were only three men that were seriously considered available by the southern democrats—Tilden, Bayard and Hancock. It is conceded by many that Robinson's defeat settled Tilden, although Robinson's defeat settled Tilden, there are strong men who still insist that Uncle; Sammy is master of the situation.

The sudden rise in Bayard stock is explained, by the fact that his record is clean on the Blackburn policy in the extra session, which it is now universally conceded was a losing card. The nomination of Bay-ard will, it is thought, restore the confidence that was shaken by the "starvation" resolu-tions, he having opposed them steadily and persistently. There is not the slightest trace of a Hendricks boom, as it is conceded that Tilden could and would prevent his getting the vote of New York, even if he were nominated. His name is scarcely ever men-tioned. There is some talk of Seymour and even a hint of Potter, but there is no doubt that Bayard is the favorite by large odds. He has always been the choice of the south, simply because it was never deemed politic to put him on the track.

Something He Loves.

[New York letter Boston Herald.] Tilden still keeps up his habit of horse-back riding, and in the saddle carries him-self with ease. The one thing which this strange old bacherlor loves is a horse, and he loves a horse not as Grant does, for the quality of speed, but with the wholeness of affection which an Arab bestows on his favorite steed. The man who loves a horse as Tilden does, must have within, however thick a crust of ice he may assume, some humane and admirable qualities. Mr. Tilden cultivates expressionless eyes as Talley-rand did drooping eyelids, and for the same reason—to conceal his thoughts. Bismarck's brusquerie and Beaconsfield's affectation of shabbiness and decrepitude when on the street are to be put in the same category of great men's mannerisms. Mr. Tilden's whis-per has become a theme for paragraphic humorists, His own explanation of this queer habit is that he thereby economizes strength. A bronchial affection might afford a more satisfactory explanation.

What a Stalwart Triumph Means.

[Boston Times.] The prospects are for a republican success next year. In that event, under the present temper of the party, we should be likely to see the destruction of all that has been gained in the purifying of the civil service, and the return to power of the entire machine brigade; in consequence, a long interval of jobbery, corruption and general demoraliza-tion until the inevitable reaction takes place, when all that has been thus far accomplished will have to be done over again. It seems that more than one lesson is needed to teach the people that a civil service conducted on business principles is indispensable for the permanent security of the nation.

The Sad Slory of a Blighted Life...Sin Visit-

[New York Correspondence Chicago Inter-Ocean.]

The story of how Barton Key won the affections of the beautiful Italian. Therese Sickles, and received in return a bullet from the bands of her husband, the published statement the latter made to villify his wife and justify his honorable deed, the confession of the disgraced and heart-broken woman their separation; later, their reconciliation and finally her death, and his second mar-riage, which took place the same day that a grand requiem mass was being said for the oul of Therese; and all the attendant circumstances which created so much scandal, have been raked up often enough since to be generally known, but of the fate of the little child without a mother, and with a tyran-nical father, little has been heard.

At an early age she was taken abroad and placed in a conventschool, where she grew up in the greatest seclusion, knowing nothing of the shocking story attached to her family name; and naturally of a bright and joyous disposition, was generally liked and made a pet of. It happened one evening at a reception she was seated quietly in a corner watching the was stated quietly in a corner watching the guests as they arrived, when a vivacious old french lady, one of those reservoirs of family affairs and gossip, sat down by her, quite unaware that she was the daughter of the host, but recognized her as anAmerican. Paralyzed with horror and unable to speak, the girl listened to this infamous story of her mother, whom she had looked upon as a tender memory, a departed saint; heard her father branded as a murderer; her very pa-rentage doubted. When at last the sickening recital was finished, poor Laura Sickles dragged herself as best she could from the gay crowded hall into her own room, where she sat in tearless agony till the last guest had departed, the last strains of music rowned in the noise of carriage wheels.

Then she sought her father, and on her knees begged him to tell her if this was true, And the father, with all the dramatic ges-tures and pictured words he is so fond of using, told her the miserable truth, and held before the daughter the image of a mother steeped in sin. Could anything be more revolting or heart-sickening? From that day, say the people who knew Laura Sickles, she was a changed girl, and with only one desire on earth—to go into a convent, a wish her father would not yield to. From being frank and animated, she became reserved and melancholy to morbidness. When told she looked like her mother, she shrank as if from a rude touch. She never seemed to expect that the same respect would be shown to her as to other women, or that men could possibly admire, much less love or wish to marry her.

This melancholy and reserve would at times give way to a perfect recklessness and wild gayety that was as painful in its kind as the other, but at the same time never could be misconstrued as "fast." It is said that her father was determined for her to marry, but that over and over again she had positively declared she would not; that she would not link her name with that of a man she loved, and without love she would not marry. So time rolled on, until Laura Sickles was 26 years old—a lovely, handsome woman, with few friends, little popularity, anloving and unloved, though capable of strong feeling, and with a pride considered

The Strong Man of the Republicans. [Washington Star.]

One of the most hopeful signs of our politics is the growing independence of the voter. So long as a large proportion of our voting element maintain their own freedom and the freedom of their ballot, there is no danger to the republic. The late election in New York was a fair test of the power of the independent voter. He was powerful in both parties and in all factions. Cornell, a man forced upon his party by the machine, ran behind other candidates on the ticket and was elected only by democratic division. In the democratic party nearly 80,000 voters cast their ballots for John Kelly, a bolter, to overthrow the Tilden machine. Many of the overthrow the Tilden machine. Many men who voted for Kelly for the named supported the Robinson local ticket as a protest against the despotic power of Tam many. Taken all in all the independent voters are the only ones who came victorious out of the New York election, and unless they are consulted and respected they will win a great victory next year.

Welcome News to All Sufferers from

Read, Remember, Rise, Resolve and Recover.

Dr. C. R. Sykes, of this city, was 24 years a sufferer from Catarrh. So bad did the disease finally become that physicians refused to prescribe for him, and his case was considered hopeless from Consumption, into which it had developed. As a last resort he attempted treatment with a remedy and upon a basis wholly his own, and the result was a complete cure. Realizing the remarkable nature of his recovery, he has given the remedy to the public for nine years past, and the number of remarkable cures effected is simply wonderful. From the intinite number we can only mention few, among them the following:

Miss Annie Green, of this city, 83 Larrabee st., came to Dr. Sykes for treatment after having vainly tried Colorado and numerous physicians. Her palate was entirely gone, and a hole as large as the end of the thumb was eaten through the veil above. A hole was also eaten clear through the ness. In addition to this her lungs were weak and sore; she had a bad cough, and no appetite. By six weeks' treatment the palate and nose were completely healed, the breathing was sweet, there was no cough or sorchess of the lungs, and she had gained 22 pounds in flesh.

Mrs Nancy Mitchell, of Juniata, Nebraska, has just made the following statement:

"I came to Chicago from Juniata, Adams county, Nebraska, and put myself under Dr. Sykes's treatment for a Cancerous Catarrh, which had eaten a hole through the roof of my mouth as large as a 25 cent piece, and had then eaten through into my nose, and actually destroyed more than one-half of my nose, removing two large bones. It had also saten clear to the corner of one eye, and to the bridge above my nose, but left the lower end of it sound. Both my nostrils were as raw as they could be; and now, after only two weeks' treatment, my recovery has been so rapid I am sure in a short time to be completely cured."

The nunsual nature of these cures would seem impossible were they not sustainable by numerous others. They are not only wonderful; t available to all.

'The remedy is known as "Dr. Sykes's Sure Cure for Catarrh." which, with his Insuffiator, all complete, is sold at the low price of $1.50 by Browning & Sloan and Stewart & Barry.

MRS. JARDLE'S VISITOR.

A Widely Traveled Guest Discourseth. There was a knock at Mrs. Jardle's residence on North Alabama street this morning, at the door that opens out on the side porch. An exceedingly moldy tramp stood there asking a breakfast. Mrs. Jardle is naturally asking a breakfast. Mrs. sardle is naturally a charitable woman, and thanksgiving with its heart-opening influences had so recently gone by that its impress was not yet effaced, and she could not turn the hungry wretch away. She asked him to come in. The breakfast things were still on the table, and the tramp shuffled to a chair, while she busied herself in putting the meat and biscuit in easy reach and pouring the coffee.

"Ab," said he slipping his rusty hat from his lap to the floor and bringing his chair closer to the table, "here we are!" Jardle nodded approvingly as he grabbed a biscuit. Then with the warm coffee within and the genial fire from the grate shining on his countenance and cuddling among the rents in his rags, he became conversational. Under difficulties, too, for with his mouth filled with neat and other victuals, it was no easy natter to talk at all. "Now ma'am," said he, "nubbuddy, to look at that biscuit with its innocent smile, as it opens like a lily, white as the driven snow and light as thistledown, would ever suspect that there is a large percentage of corn-meal in that amiapound, now would they, mum. Mrs. Jardle was indignant and reached for the biscuit plate. The tramp fixed her with his glittering eye and continued:

"Or that the lard in them biscuit has from 8 to 10 per cent, of water put into it under high pressure? Or that the baking powder ised 'em is not pure cream of tartar and licarbonate of soda, but may be that chemical known as acid phosphate of lime? Mrs. Jardle made another futile attempt to get possession of the offending biscuits.

The tramp said on: "It's mor'n likely, mum, that the baking powder in them biscuits contains alum. What d'ye think of that mum?"

Mrs. Jardle gasped, but made no audible

"Do you know what alum does, mum, when taken into the human stomach? I'll tell you. It destroys the mucous membrane, constringes all organic fibers, and tends to diminish the blood supply. Besides that, it's a decided irritant, and acts as a mechanical a decided irritant, and acts as a mechanical cmetic. This is my sixth. When I eat twelve you will see me drop down a corpse on the floor before you."

Mrs. Jardle brightened up a little.

"But to-day I'll stop on eleven." Here he took a long drink of coffee. "Now this coffee may be pure, but it's doubtful. I hope you don't buy it already ground. I thought I detected a chicory flavor. Sometimes coffee is adulterated with ground peas, sometimes parched corp, but oftenest with chicory. parched cors, but oftenest with chicory. Chicory is much cheaper than coffee, and is a great favorite of the chemists who prepare ground coffee. Even the sugar that I'm get-ting in my coffee, now as I go my rounds, isn't what it orter be, having a large percentage of clucose in it, and the molasses one encounters is nearly all glucose."

Here Mrs. Jardle attempted to escape, but thought better of it, and with an air of resignation settled herself in her chair, the tramp pouring out a third cup of coffee for himself,

"This black pepper, I'll sprinkle some of it on the beef. Your steak is a lee-tle tough mum. This pepper is probably about one fourth inert matter of some kind, cornmea or sawdust. I'll try some of your vinegar on the fried cabbage. You don't call that cider vinegar, I hope, mum? It's probably only oxidized alcohol, or more likely yet, as the cheeset vinegar to effect we may be cheeset vinegars to effect we may be compared to the cheeset vinegars to effect we may be compared to the cheeset vinegars to effect we may be compared to the cheese the che the cheapest vinegars too often are, merely diluted sulphuric acid, which is not a pleas-ant stranger to introduce into your stomach, mum. This sulphuric acid vinegar is quite mum. This sulphuric acid vinegar is quite clear when first made, but after, the burnt sugar is added it has the rich brown color of that cider vinegar you got from Uncle John from the old farm four years ago. Just fill up this coffee cup, and I'll top off with a little of this jelly. Pineapple jelly, you call it, mum? You've been kind to me, and I don't make the property of the p don't mind telling you that this pineapple ielly is probably made out of animal gelatine—made from the refuse of bones and other animal matter. The flavor is artificial, too; made from butyric ether, which is a product of rancid butter and rotten cheese. Hardly any of these grocers' jellies have honest flavors, etherial essences being used for nearly all of them. Well, I must go. I don't think I'll last long. These adulterations—I meet them everywhere-are slowly but surely sapping my life away." went out on the porch, along the brick walk, passed out the gate, turned the corner. Mrs. Jardle looked at the biscuit plate. He Humilisting Position of American Politics.

To the Editor of The Indianapolis News: American politics never presented a more disgraceful spectacle than it does to-day. On the one hand the democrats are standing in mortal fear of Mr. Tilden. Not one in a hundred wishes to vote for him, and many are bold enough to openly denounce him; yet he has such a grip, or is supposed to have that the party is afraid to nominate anybody else, though to all human appearances to nominate him is certain defeat. "If he wants it he can get it," is the one answer to all, questions on the subject, and everybody nows that he wants it.

But, if there is any difference, the condiion of the republican party is still more de-plorable and humiliating. With not one in a hundred of the voters anxious to vote for him, and a very large per cent. so hostile as not to vote for him at all, yet General Grant stands in such a position as to compel the leaders of the party to say that if he wants it he can have it, and everybody knows that he wants it unless Providence, the can have it, and everybody knows that he wants it unless Providence, or the ship canal. or something else, provides ample means for his support. Gen, Grant understands the situation, and with his characteristic selfishness he holds it. Not even John Sherman, who has openly avowed his candidacy, dares say more than to echo the refrain: "If he wants it he than to echo the refrain: "If he wants it he can get it." There is not an intelligent American who does not feel the humiliation of this state of affairs—two men holding the movements of their respective parties in their own hands, with the rank and file squirming under the tyranny of the party yoke which compels them to thus submit. What will be the result if either is nominated and not the other, it is not difficult to foresee; what the result if both are nominated is still more difficult. Will the independent voters stay at home, or will they crystalize around some independent idea and man? Who can tell? Most likely the former. But if neither is nominated there will be a little the liveliest campaign that this country has ever seen, and no other prominent man on either side will influence the popular vote of either party in any appreciable degree.

THE NORTH AMERICAN REVIEW. There is a tendency of late in the Reviews of this country to limit the number of papers, presenting rather exhaustive discussion than great variety of topics which might be aid to be characteristic of magazines. This tendency is one to be commended. It greatly increases the value of the review. In this umber of the North American there are only even papers in all and two of these are first installments of the subjects they treat. The names of the authors are guaranty for their excellence, "Romanism and the Irish race in the United States," is the opening paper by James Anthony Fraude. George S. Boutwell writes of "Young men in politics." "The Religion of today," is approximately according to the control of the control o

"The Kelgion of to-day" is anonymous. Professor Bonamy Price asks "Is political economy a science?" "English and American physique," is discussed by George M. Beard. "The permanence of political forces," is discussed by Cuthbert Mills, and "Recent Literature," by Lohn R. G. Hagrad. Expensive subscience. John R. G. Hazzard. From this collection hardly any one need turn unsatisfied. A oticeable characteristic of all the papers is neir current value. They busy themselves with the live questions of the hour, affording in this a sharp contrast with the average In this a sharp contrast with the average British Review with its abstract discussion. If in the eyes of the scholar a review seems to lose anything in dignity by this it must be admitted that it gains in interest and we do not hesitate to say in value, at least of the most value to the greatest number. Mr. Froude's paper is one that will excite much interest. It touches a topic that has been brought into considerable prominence. been brought into considerable prominence of late by specific cases of intolerance. "The permanence of political forces" is a contribution to a much agitated subject and is of corresponding interest, while the "English and American Physique" makes a most attractive picture and one that will aid the American in knowing himself.

LIPPINCTT'S MAGAZINE. A notable feature of the December Lipincott is the number of articles descriptive f life and manners at home and abroad. There are thirteen papers in all besides the monthly gossip and "Literature of the

This household magazine for December comes with its usual quantum of good things. Perhaps the most striking paper is "An answer to the cry for more English," by Professor A. S. Hill, of Harvard. It deals with education in advocacy of the course which comprehends a thorough training in English. Three of the best known writers of really good short stories are represented in this issue; Mrs. Rose Terry Cooke by Doom and Dan, a characteristic specimen of her work; Mrs. Sarah O. Jewett, the author of Deephastyle; and Mr. Edward Bellamy, whose story is called Jane Hicks. George M. Towle has a paper on Gladstone, which includes personal reminiscences as an orator. It is very interesting. A sketch of the late Dr. Horace Bushnell, by H. P. Goddard, is also attractive. There are a number of other papers, covering a wide range of topics, and all making this number of "Good Company" one of the best. HARPER'S WEEKLY.

This "Journal of Civilization" never more effectively filled its mission than it is doing to-day. Aside from the forceful and unique productions of Nast, it long ago stood alone among illustrated papers, no less for the exellence of its work than for its discriminaion in its choice of subjects, so that week fter week it caught the saliencies of Ameriafter week it caught the saliencies of American life, and year after year made a graphic history of the time which the unaided pen could never chronicle. With its work in this way it does no less commendable service in literature, presenting the freshest contributions of the best authors, while its editorial page has long ago came to be recognized as a power. The independent position the Messrs, Harper took in the New York election cannot but react to the greater strength of their but re-act to the greater strength of their Weekly. There is a broad opening for it to become, as they announced then it should, become, as they announced then it should, entirely untrammeled by any party necessity, perfectly independent in its course. The other features of the paper appeal to a constituency that is not limited to any political boundaries. It is in keeping that its opinions should likewise be delivered from the high plane of independence.

SCRIBNER'S MONTHLY. The opening paper of this magazine con-cerns itself with "The Capitol of New York," an interesting, descriptive and critical paper with profuse illustrations of the building which is claimed to be the "most handsome work of public architecture this country has to show." "The John Hopkins University" is finely described by Mrs. S. B. Herrick. Boyesen has a paper on "Two Visits to Victor Hugo." "Coffee Culture in Brazil" is graphically described in the closing paper of the series. The closing paper of E. C. Stedman upon Bayard Taylor is also given. There is a unique contribution of rowns a calletian of unique contribution of poems, a collection of twenty "Poems by American Women. Jamses's story "Confidence" reaches its fifth installment. "The Grandissimes" by Cable progresses to its second part. The new features of the magazine are too numerous to mention. Sufficient has been told to show how rich this number is. Warned by the exhaustion of the last edition the first edition of this month has been put at 103,000; sub-stantial proof of the growing popularity of

WIDE AWAKZ. There never were so many good things for so little money as Wide Awake affords. The December number is so good that the Christmas number can hardly be better, though the publishers promise that it shall be, and they have never failed to fulfill their promises. The current number contains more than twenty articles from favorite conmore than twenty articles from favorite con-tributors, and innumerable pictures.

THE INTERNATIONAL REVIEW. December's number of this publication has an art and literary flavor rather than a political and economic one. There is a paper on "Catullus" by William Everett, the second installment of "The Paris Salon, 1879," by Ch. Gindriez, which is illustrated by two handsome specimens of the Salon's display. W. W. Story has 'the second part of his paper on "the art of casting in plaster among the ancient Greeks and Romans." Hon. Lyon Playfair writes of "Technical Education the Supplement of Free Trade and Protection." John E. C Curran has a paper on "Prince Rismarck and protection." "Johnanes king of kinge" and his Christian empire in Africa" is discussedly Edwin De Leon. Henry W. Elliott has a paper on "The Smithsonian institution" and there are the usual reviews of current literature. The subjects make good the an art and literary flavor rather than a politliterature. The subjects make good the name "International," ancient Rome in his-tory and art, and ancient Greece in the last particular are touched upon; modern Germany, and France and America. As a whole this issue is very interesting.

The Christmas number of St. Nicholas is undoubtedly the finest juvenile magazine ever printed in this or any other country. Its illustrations are marvels of the engraver's Its illustrations are marvels of the engraver's art, and its articles are written by the leading story writers of the country. It offers so great a variety that all healthy youthful tastes may be suited, and many of its papers may be read with profit by adults. And this is only an earnest of what it proposes to continue to do throughout the coming year.

Another meeting of the executive committee on the Grant reception was held yesterday. It was decided to have ten thousand copies of the program printed, which Mr. Gale promised to see distributed on all the incoming train, so that people might know just what to expect. The Union Veteran association was requested to remain on duty at the union depot on Tuesday morning, receive all organized bodies, escort them to the headquarters, furnish them with printed slips giving them the order of exercises and slips giving them the order of exercises and locations of the headquarters of each regiment and battery.

Finance, invitation and decoration committees made favorable reports. An elaborate display of bunting is promised. Five military companies and seven bands will be in the procession. There will be plenty of rooms and halls for organized unions, Another meeting of the committee will be held to-morrow.

John Olin Radeliffe. J. O. Radcliffe, cashier of Meridian National bank, died last night at his residence on North Meridian street, of typhoid fever. Mr. Radcliffe was born in Dorchester county: Maryland, November 19, 1850, and came to this city in 1869, taking service with institution the next spring to take a clerkship in Woollen, Webb & Co.'s bank, where he remained until 1873, when he was made teller of the Meridian national bank, and on the retirement of John G. Kennedy was elected cashier. In the fall of 1873 he mar-ried Miss Ella Ramsey, daughter of John F.

Rev. H. M. Morey's Farewell Sermon. Rev. H. M. Morey will enter upon his ministrations at the Third Presbyterian church next Sunday. The South Bend Tribune says:

In the evening Mr. Morey preached his farewell sermon to one of the largest congregation ever assembled in this city, the commodious church being completely filled and many turned away from the doors. To afford their congregations an opportunity to join that at the First Presbyterian church, no evening services were held in the First Methodist, the Baptist and Reformed churches, and the pastors of these, together with Rev. Mr. McKee, of Mishawaka, assisted Mr. Morey in conducting the services. Rev. H. A. Gobin, pastor of the first Methodist Episcopal church, read the scriptural selection. Rev. N. D. Williamson, pastor of the Reformed church, led in prayer, and Rev. Mr. McKee announced the first hymn. Mr. Morey's sermon was exceedingly beautiful and impressive, and at the close he referred feelingly to the pleasant relations that had always existed between him and the other ministers of the city.

Colored Carolinians Want Information. Governor Williams received the following postal card communication yesterday from Kingston, North Carolina. Kingston is in Lenoir county, which adjoins the county from which the negroes now in Patnam county came.

KINGSTON, N. C. November 26, 1879. Hop. Mr. Williams:

Hon. Mr. Williams:

Dear Sir,—The colored people here are very anxious, some of them, to immigrate to your state. Please write me whether you think their chances are any better there than here for farmers and ishorers. Please write me what an average hand can earn on a farm. They have all kinds of tales what they can do there and are half crasy to go. Please answer this as soon as possible. Yours etc.

The governor has replied that good farm hands receive from $13 to $15 per month in the summer, but there is little demand for

Yesterday afternoon, George McCune was arrested as a suspected felon and for obtaining money under false pretenses. This morning, in the city court, he was confronted by half a dozen women, to whom he had sold a powder, warranted to prevent coal oil from exploding in lamps. He charged and received $5 from every one of the parties, promising a premium of some kind, to be delivered in a few days. He was compelled to make restitution of the amounts and was fined for gaming and peddling without a license.

Claim for Damages.

This morning, Jonathan E. Hollingsworth, of Pike township, by attorney, filed a claim with the county commissioners, for damages, accompanied by a statement of the circumstances under which they were incurred. On the 19th of August last, a bridge over Stanton's creek, near New Augusta, gave 'way_ while he was driving a horse power over it, precipitating team, vehicle and driver into the stream below. Loss of time, service of the machine and repairs thereto amount, according to an itemized account filed therewith, to $200.40.

Forty Miles Away.

Last night Prof. Tingley lectured in Meharry hall, Greencastle, to an audience of 400. The hall was connected by telephone with the office of Superintendent Wallick in this city, where the telegraph quartette and J. B. Cameron rendered some excellent vocal and instrumental music, which was highly enjoyed by the Greencastle people. The performers distinctly heard the applause which greeted their efforts.

Sorrows of an Inventor.

Cooper & Bailey's menagerie and circus are at the stock yards to-day, en route from Philadelphia to St. Louis. A News reporter was looking at the animals this morning, was looking at the animals this morning, when he was attracted to a large camel which stood aside, solitary, with quivering lip, and a settled and profound melancholy on his countenance. The reporter was about to address a remark to the quadruped, when one of the men in charge stepped forward. "Hush," said he, "not a word to hm," jerking his eyes in the direction of the camel. "Step this way, furder off. This is a sad, sad story," wiping his eyes on his sleeve. "Pardon this emotion, but when I look at that patient sufferer and think how he has been awindled, damifican keep my feelings from slippin' their halters and cavortin' round in this disgustin' way. He's an inventor, and slippin' their halters and cavortin' round in this disgustin' way. He's an inventor, and has, of course, been chawed up by capitalists. See that hump on his back. His own get up. What d'ye think of that for a liver pad? Too poor to take out a patent, Idea stolen from him, and others reapin' the benefit of his invention, robbing him warry day. He's a foreigner too that's every day. He's a foreigner, too, that's agin him; family in Egypt in almost desti-tute circumstances. Sad case. Be careful in spellin' out his name not to git him mixed up with that Scotch family of Campbells. Well, take care of yourself; see you later."

Robert Colter, the man who was shot Sunday by James H. Russell, is in a dauger-ous condition. Erysipelas has set in in the wound, and fears of bad or the worst results are entertained. Marshal Colter, brother of the injured man, told a News reporter this morning that Russell and another man kicked Robert about the head and breast, after knocking him down, so that he is not yet able to see out of one eye nor to turn over in bed. They attempted to throw him in the cistern used for cleaning vehicles, and had thrust one arm into the opening, when he managed to escape their

A Card from Mr. Brown.

To the Editor of The Indianapolis News: The News is mistaken in its information as The News is mistaken in its information as to my leaving the county treasurer's office because of "incompatibility of temper," as is also the Journal in its statement that my withdrawal was because of my "not liking the management of affairs." I took service in the treasurer's office under the new treasurer three months ago, with the understanding that it was to be but temporary, and continued therein a month longer than I anticipated the second of the month longer than I anticipated the second of the month longer than I anticipated the second of the month longer than I anticipated the second of the month longer than I anticipated the tinued therein a month longer than I anticipated. Our personal relations have been and still are pleasant, and I have no occasion to dislike the management of the office or to offer any criticism upon it, further than to offer any criticism upon it, further than to-say that that office is now managed under a system which seems almost perfect account-ability in collections and returns to the auditor—a condition of affairs heretofore unknown in that office—and that Dr. Loftin, in my opinion, understands the duties of his office fully as well as any of hispredecessors, and is discharging them faithfully. I left the office because of engagements to intro-duce the same system in other counties. By publishing this you will oblige, yours truly, publishing this you will oblige, yours truly,

Morton Poisoned Indiana.

[W. D. Bickham.] Morton sowed the virus of greenbackism in Indiana. I can remember well when, in 1866, in room 36 of the Ebbitt house, he read me his carefully prepared speech on the finances. I listened attentively, but with trepidation as to the result. At the conclusion he asked me what I thought. I said, "I think you are wrong; I hope you will not deliver it; wrong will come from it; it will do great injury." He thought differently, and the speech was delivered, and from it the wirms that nermeates the political wirs of virus that permeates the political veins of Indiana still lingers. Morton, before he died, regretted the making of that speech more than any great act of his life. I am told that in his last days he mourned its results.

> The Boom for Grant. [Ex-Senator Doolittle in Boston Herald]

"Who are for Grant?"

"The office holders, 100,000 strong, the military organizations to a certain extent; the men who want a strong government, and whose judgments are favorable to imperialism, and there are a great many of them among the shoddy rich. The whisky thieves and the enthusiastic 'boomers' are all for him, the bishops and priests of the Methodist church are for him, and they constitute a very powerful organization, and do very much in managing the political affairs of the country under the lead of Bishop Simpson, and, aithough the judgment of the thinking republicans is against his nomination, these forces are too powerful, and will make themselves felt." "Who are for Grant?"

Of Course Not. [Washington Star.]

Senator Johnson says there is not the slightest probability of the election of a republican to the United States senate from Virginia. He says the democratic majority in the state legislature, consisting of both debt payers and readjusters, will harmonize sufficiently to chose a democratic successor to Senator Withers.

Something of a finter has been created in the kid glove market by the card published in yesterday's News by Mr. H. S. Tucker. of the Parisian Kid Glove Depot, 12 and 14 West Washington street, cutting prices fearfully on all first quality button goods. The secret of this movement seems to be the sweening professor that he secret is at in sweeping preference that has recently set in for the patent fastener Foster glove, which laces up with charming facility and ease, and of which Mr. Tucker has the exclusive sale. It also appears that Mr. Tucker, doing an exclusive glove trade, and importing his goods, has a great advantage in prices on the old style button gloves, upon which he now sees fit to reduce prices below a living profit, because the demand is turning to his Foster Uvercoats patent fastening.
